

This declaration is a response to the event that was named The Final Experiment, and was conducted in December 2024 under the leadership of Will Duffy.

The experiment was done under the presumption and proclamation of being the decisive conclusion as to whether we live on a spinning ball flying constantly into a vast ever-expanding space or if we in fact live on a world that is described in NASAs own document as a 'flat, non-rotating earth'.

The purpose of this declaration is three-fold:

- 1 – the authority possessed by Will Duffy in regards to making such an experiment.
- 2 – the claim that this is proof enough to decide the above mentioned notion.
- 3 – suggestions for real experiments; if in fact the will behind such a thing is to actually know the truth.

We who on this matter, and this only, agree with NASAs description of the earth as 'flat and non-rotating', will be named Flat Earthers in this declaration, even though the rightful term may also be Biblical Cosmologists – or as we might be using as a common ground: The Firmamentals.

To clarify what we all have in common, is also that the term 'flat' is used as a base line for our world, and that we view our world as a topographical plane with hills and valleys.

1 – the authority for the experiment..

...was never in advance given by our community of Flat Earthers, to Will Duffy and whomever he chose to bring with him. The reason for this is two-fold: First of all, we don't trust people who by their own admission states that lying is acceptable. Secondly, we who are believers of the Biblical view of the earth finds it not trustworthy when anyone claims to be believers as well, yet are not willing to look at the extremely well documentation that is in the Bible.

And this leads us to claim number two:

2 – the claim that this experiment should in any way determine the shape of the earth is absurd for various reasons. Whether or not the sun may be seen 24 hours straight in Antarctica has nothing to do with the shape of the earth. Both the geocentric and the heliocentric model may present this as a possibility. And even if it were so, is so, it changes none of these things:

- * water always finds its level.
- * large bodies of water always needs a container.
- * oxygen and vacuum can not co-exist without a barrier.
- * we see way to far according to the 8 inches per miles squared prediction of the globe model.

Also, seeing a 24 hour sun in Antarctica would give more probability to the flat and stationary model, in the sense that a sun seen for 24 hours straight – as in the North during two whole months in the summer time – is consistent with our claim that

* the earth stands still and the luminaries are moving in circuits above us. This is observably so and would not be questioned had we not been indoctrinated with a model that make claims to the contrary.

3 – real experiments with value are being conducted in the thousands around our world. Many are those who have exposed the lie behind the globe math of 8 inches per miles squared. Using lights, lasers, mirrors etc., thousands have documented and proven beyond any shadow of doubt to anyone willing to see, that there is no curvature to be found. Anywhere.

However, since the fascination seems to be with Antarctica, we are suggesting a different experiment. Not looking up at the sky to determine the shape of the ground – which is nonsensical – but by once again putting the globe math to the test.

According to the heliocentric worldview, the area is 13 660 000 km<sup>2</sup>.

We, the Flat Earthers, claim this high altitude of land is the ice wall surrounding our whole world, which obviously would highly enlarge this number.

We suggest a circumnavigation of the land area called Antarctica, possibly with two crews going in opposite directions along the coastline with a meeting point halfway, in which to calculate the true distance of the so-called South pole area of your globe. The distance will be measured by both ships. As the so called final experiment, this should be done with parties from both sides on each ship and with a camera constantly overseeing the measurements of the travelled distance and time.

Alternatively a trip across the same area, going from North to North "around the globe". Both experiments would show us something real about the area you so willingly used as a central place for your experiment.

Either of these alternatives will indeed show the major discrepancy in our two very different world views; a pole of ice on the bottom of your globe vs the container placed around the whole Earth holding the water in place.

These would be experiments that made sense – and for this reason, we already know that neither will be conducted, since the default position then would have to be the willingness to see the Truth and not be paid or scared of by anyone promoting the heliocentric lie. However, Will Duffy, we will give you an opportunity to prove us wrong; with a crew chosen and validated by the community to go with you. The experiment called The Final Experiment, TFE, however, we cannot acknowledge for above mentioned reasons, and on this we stand firm and united.

And since we Flat Earthers like to keep things simple (because they are), we will also suggest that any of the points made in paragraph 2 of this declaration, are good experiments that we welcome anyone to disprove! It should be the easier alternative, demanding less people involved, less money, time etc. So, please: prove us wrong!

We are not on a sinking ship – you are.

Our notion to present the Truth has not been compromised by TFE, simply because it touches on nothing of value to scientific (real scientific) facts. So no, we have no more difficulties presenting God, Jehovah's, Truth than before you got involved. To the contrary: we are growing as a community, thousands are coming to Christ through the knowledge presented that are so easily understandable for a true Truth seeker (the points in section 2 above) and even mightily confirmed by the Word.

But thank you – your devotion to spend so much time quarreling with what according to you is a ridiculous, pathetic, stupid (chose your own description: this is based on what we constantly hear about the 'Flat Earth topic') idea, has made us more convinced we're for sure gaining terrain.

And we are.

May God be true and every man a liar – may you repent and gather with The Lord instead of scattering from Satan's side for whatever reasons motivating you.

PS – that goes for you too mr. MCToon.

The Truth is unchangeable – and it always finds a way. Join us on the winning side.
